PREFACE.

In presenting the accompanying compilation to the Public, its compiler and publisher, with pleasurable feelings, acknowledges the universal politeness of those citizens of Washington with whom he has come in contact in its preparation, and which was so essentially conducive to an agreeable performance of the duty he assumed.

For the portions of matter which it contains relative to the General Government, he also tenders his acknowledgements to those connected with its several Departments for their courteous facilities of information, which he has so often witnessed heretofore when their official associate, but the full value of which can only be known to a recipient.

To those who purchase this book or advertise in it, he will say, that he hopes and believes that the means of information which it contains, and its extensive circulation, with the advantages thereby that will accrue to them, in the general diffusion of their business cards, will amply compensate them for their flattering custom.

Executive Way,* between the northern junctions of New York avenue and 15th street west and Pennsylvania avenue and 17th street west, the President's House on the south side, and Lafayette Square on the north,

* Facts like the following will, no doubt, be thought sufficient authority for the adoption of so becoming a name as Executive Way for this beautiful thoroughfare—which has grown up and is now approaching maturity, but as yet is unbaptized, and without a name. Being surrounded by, and in habitual intercourse with titled neighbors, it has, with the public generally, obtained the appellation of the most distinguished of them, Pennsylvania Avenue; but it must bear, if any, but a collateral relationship to that long and ancient line, and certainly is not more nearly allied to it than it is to New York Avenue. Without having any positive claims to the lineage of G street, it yet bears to it an analogical affinity; but if this street be its true paternity, its friends have repudiated the parentage, and will not permit it to assume the name of, as yet, so undistinguished an ancestor. Its budding, green, and growing beauties, do really claim for it a name appropriate and renowned; to obtain this, the fathers of the city were appealed to in its behalf, when some of them said it was part of Pennsylvania Avenue, and should be so called; others were certain that it was part of G street, and others again were positive that it had no name; so the doubtfully named or nameless way being left in this uncertainty, the mothers of the city were invoked to take it under their care, and avert, if possible, its worse than orphan destiny. Whereupon, they met in "council strong," and with the feeling of kindness for the neglected and gentle censure toward the neglectful, that has ever characterized the noble spirited matrons of republics, from the days of palmy Rome to those of youthful Washington, decreed unanimously, that this rising, parentless, and nameless beauty should be adopted by themselves, and taken under their especial charge, and that the fathers have been most shamefully negligent of their duty in not having long since given it a name; but as they, in this particular, evince but one of the most prominent frailties of their nature, an utter indifference to the naming of their own offspring, they be forgiven, upon the condition of setting and following the example of ever hereafter calling it Executive Way; and also, that they be the medium through whom its Patronymic be respectfully requested to stand god-father at its baptism, and then and there solemnly promise, that the ceremony of sprinkling shall be repeated every summer, so that its name may be pleasantly remembered, and its paths be those of comfort. And at the same council and sitting, it was further decreed, that the road extending from the southern junctions of Pennsylvania Avenue and 15th street west, and of New York Avenue and 17th street west, usually known as the "south," or "back road," be hereafter, upon the planting of one or more rows of trees, called Sylvan Way; but that it retain its present name until the trees are planted.

*When Congress passed the law appropriating money for the establishment of a hospital for the mentally insane in the District of Columbia, they performed a deed of mercy for which the members individually and the national prosperity will be most certainly rewarded with blessings, though they be imperceptible and unknown. The intention of Congress, in the establishment of this institution, was of the noblest kind; but the wisdom which controlled in the selection and choice of its site was certainly (so far as it was connected with this subject) of the most unfortunate order, and seems to have partaken largely of that species of flesh and bone-caring utilitarianism, which in this instance has been but too true to its creed, and does barely more than protect the community at large from the trespassing of the unfortunate, and the unfortunate from the miseries of starvation and the "peltings of the pitiless storm;" beyond this, they being placed in the habitation intended for them, no acts of wisdom or of kindness can avail them much whilst there. This habitation, though now a hospital, was once a jail, and it yet stands between the halls of justice and the prison of the accused of crime, and in which the guilty convict is incarcerated—within close view of their transit to the place of trial or to the cell of their doom —within hearing of the sounds of accusation or defence, and the moanings and wailings of the victims of the offended law. Let these facts be viewed in connection with a philosophic inquiry into the causes and effects of insanity; the cruelty then of such unwise benevolence will readily be seen, and perhaps it will be admitted, that if the subjects of it were but allowed to enjoy a free range in the open air, and the assistance of the accidental kindness of the humane, their chances of cure would be greatly increased beyond any hope that can be had for them whilst they are confined to such an abode.

There can hardly be a doubt of insanity being produced by the disease and consequent debility of one or more of the organs of the mind; hence their absence of equalized strength to control themselves harmoniously, under any inherent or extraneous cause of excitement. If this is admitted, it is then conclusive, that the most prominent means of cure to be resorted to, would be suitable diet, salubrious atmosphere, appropriate exercise, agreeable gratification to the organs of vision, blended with pleasant employment to body and mind, and such auxiliary aids as the light of medical science can apply. It must be evident to every one, that the most important of these remedial means cannot be bestowed upon the individuals who so greatly need their aid under present circumstances. There is no alternative then, within the bounds of Christian and rational feelings of humanity, but to remove this institution to some more appropriate place, and that as early as practicable; and let it not long be said, that in an age when such mighty efforts are being made to eradicate all delusion from the world, that the metropolis of this Union, in one of its efforts of wisdom and benevolence, aided in fixing it, in its most painful and horrid form, by confining, between the halls of justice and the jail, the poor lunatic, with all his delusions thick upon him.—Compiler.

* This appellation militates so much against appropriateness, and consequently good taste, and, indeed, every thing else that can be based on an idea of definite meaning, that it seems only worthy of a record upon the tablets of slang; but like all things that are not controlled by laws of precision, identity, or location, it is seemingly understood by every one; because it is easier to rest satisfied under doubts that have no immediate effect, than undergo the labor of investigation to arrive at facts. The only perceptible adaptation of this name to its locality, is that it is north of somewhere, hence "north," and unbounded in its extent, hence "liberties:" the two compounded making "northern liberties;" or it may be the mimic representative of a portion of the city or county of Philadelphia bearing the same name; if this be so, it is difficult to tell what could be the medium of association by which it established its synonyma in Washington. The only parallel to this queer way of making a name that we ever knew or expect to hear of, came under our own observation some years since, when travelling in an adjacent State. Near a secluded road, we observed a structure of rough and rustic material, which, evidently, was not a dwelling, for no fence surrounded it, nor were peering inmates visible, or the bark of the watch-dog heard. Near to this structure we saw a self-satisfied son of Ethiopia indus-triously shaving oaken shingles. We accosted him with "uncle, do tell me what house that is?" he replied in the peculiar lingo of his skin, "dat hous, massa; what hous you mean?" "I mean the house just before me—I see but one." "Wur, massa," said he, with a look of inexpressible astonishment, "don't you know what dat is? dat aint no hous!" "I certainly do not, I never saw it before." "Nebber seed it afore! wur, massa, dat's Sharp Street meetin!" We certainly will not attempt to draw and apply the parallel further than to the inappropriateness of the name to the location; but one would suppose that the name of "Sharp Street" meeting could with as much propriety be transferred from Baltimore, and applied to a building on a secluded country road, as that that of "northern liberties" could be translated from Philadelphia, and located in the legally established and clearly defined limits of Washington. But, "what's in a name? that, which we call a rose, by any other name would smell as sweet;" and no name that can be affixed to this portion of the city, can deteriorate from its beauty or retard its prosperity; which is evident, from the many splendid mansions now built and being built on avennes and streets that are lawfully begotten, and with names legally bestowed, and which are destined to a high renown, and wil. be prominent and durable monuments of the industry, wealth, and elegance, of their inhabitants.—Compiler.

* This building, being of marble, is of the most gorgeous exterior. Its lively, brilliant, and spangled whiteness, when brought in comparison with its motleyed and dingy compeers, begets the idea of bloated imbecility, and premature decay, standing side by side with youthful, healthy, and elastic beauty. But this edifice requires that emblem of strength and dignity—the portico, with its majestic pillars—to give it the true characteristic of a national structure. Though, perhaps, it is fortunate for the fame of all public buildings that may be erected in future in this city, that this one exists in any of the forms of rich and solid marble; from which material only we can form an allegory of permanency, that we may take as the type of the durability of the Union. The sandstone structures have ever appeared to us as the suitable embodiment and proper symbol, for the apprehension of weakness expressed so frequently, of the danger of the Union crumbling to pieces by its own weight. But, thank heaven, the solid minds that formed this nation have transmitted to their posterity the strength and the skill to uphold it. Then let this strength and skill be preserved, by presenting to the public mind, in the architecture of the country, such sentiments of fairly-proportioned grandeur, as will forbid the establishment of that weakness of thought which only can destroy.—Compiler.

it with our metropolis, when it had not yet emerged from infancy, and before it possessed any adornment beyond that described by the Irish poet, Mr. Moore, who visited this city in 1804, and afterward proved himself to be one of its most satiric and scorning deriders. He describes it in one of his poetic epistles, as—

> "This fam'd metropolis where fancy sees > Squares in morasses, obelisks in trees."

He, also, in the same epistle, in reference to this particular stream, exclaims:

> "And what was Goose creek once is Tiber now;"

which satiric line he explains by a note to his verse; thereby informing his readers that it is "A little stream that runs through the city, which, with intolerable affectation, they have styled the Tiber. It was originally called Goose creek." And the said line and explanatory note have ever since existed as a far spread and famed record; and is often quoted as the proof affirmative of the correctness of the charge, fact, and inference, of a ridiculous desire to mimic greatness by the assumption of time-honored names, but which must hereafter exist only as a record derogatory of its own truth, as the following copy of an extract from an ancient tract book now in possession of the present mayor of Washington will most conclusively prove; and by which the satire of the poet will be deprived of its intended severity by its want of truth to make it keen:

"JUNE THE 5TH 1663.

"Layd out for Francis Pope of this Province Gentleman a parcel of land in Charles County called Room lying on the East side of the Anacostia River, begining at a marked oak standing by the river side the bounded tree of Captain Robert Troop and running north by the river for breadth the length of 200 perches to a bounded oak standing at the mouth of a bay or inlet called Tiber, bounding on the north by the said belt and line drawn east for the length of 320 perches to a bounded oak standing in the woods on the East with a line drawn south from the end of the former line untill you meet with the exteriour bounded tree of Robert Troop called Scotland Yard on the south with the sd [said] land on the West with the sd [said] River containing and now laid out for 400 acres more or less."

There can not now be any doubt of the said stream having borne the name of "Tiber" for upward of one hundred and thirteen years before the separation of this country from the British empire, and for one hundred and thirty-seven years before the present site of the city was occupied as the seat of Government.

The poetic "squares in morasses" and "obelisks in trees" have disappeared before the advancing genius of our city, and solid structures of comfort, elegance, and utility, have usurped their places. It is beginning now to be of but little import, whether what was "Goose creek" once is "Tiber" now. For, alas! the name of either, whether it be derived from the classic and blood-dyed stream of ancient Rome, or its sacred and gabbling bird, must in a short time disappear, as certainly as the "squares in morasses" and "obelisks in trees" have done, and will, ere long, be submerged in the oblivious waters of that name of modern utility, "THE CANAL."—Compiler.

* It really does seem that the next most foolish thing to building a house on a foundation of sand, is to build a sand house on a firm foundation. Why Congress in making an appropriation for this building, (the Treasury,) should confine the material for its construction to sandstone, is more than a thinking and economical people can fully comprehend. But, fortunately, they have been tardy in granting the means for its completion, and something may yet be done for the architectural fame of the nation. The north and south wings, when constructed, will be the most conspicuous portions of the building, and it is, therefore, hoped that their material is now embedded in some marble quarry which will hereafter afford to talent in designing, and skill in executing, their just reward, by enabling them to present to the country such additions to this edifice as all may be proud of. They will then use material of sufficient solidity and adhesiveness to form arches of wide and appropriate expanse, and columns of classic models strong enough to support them, and leave upon the mind of the beholder the idea of symmetrical strength unstrained.

This building, at present, certainly does not reach a proper conception of what it ought to be; no view of it ever arouses any portion of an idea of sublimity; and indeed, if all its purposes of utility were not answered, it would present prominent points of the ridiculous. Then why construct a national building and apply to it all the essential adornments that have descended to us from ancient theory and fact, of material which from its inherent weakness can not give to it any of their forms or proportions of grandeur?

The eastern colonnade of this building presents to the view a range of columns that can hardly be described in any other way than as being almost in lock-step with each other, and which required but little more architectural skill and taste to erect them than to build an upright wall to support a roof. Science could have measured with minute accuracy, and with marble for its material, would have given such appropriate and exact distance to the columns, that must have left each to support, by its isolated strength, the precise weight that was proper to its form; and this form and the expanse of entablature being mutually proportioned, there would then be presented a façade of general congruity; and if all and each part was based on a desire to represent conceptions of sublimity, we would then have had that outward style of architecture which has always commanded the respect of barbarians, has been the tutor to advancing refinement, and has stood for ages the shocks and wear of the elements.—Compiler.

* This building, with its various dependencies, as also the buildings of the State and Navy Departments, are of such inflammable materials, and filled with the like contents, that a single spark of fire may be the cause of their entire destruction, and consequently that of their valuable deposits; their very appearance, joined to the past fate of similar edifices, makes a powerful appeal to Congress to substitute for them fire-proof buildings.

We would here also say that the interior of the fire-proof buildings are not perfectly safe, and we would take the liberty of suggesting that iron cases be furnished to all the rooms, they being the only certain means of preservation for the accounts, and in many instances the historical records of the country. And we believe that this incombustible, and in every way safe material, could be obtained at a cost even less than the ornamental wood which is now used for that purpose. A reminiscence at this moment flashes across our mind of the imminent peril in which was once placed the valuable records of the Revolution, including many of the Washington and other papers, that have since been saved from the repetition of such danger by their publication. The writer of this, at the time referred to, was employed on special business by the State Department; he had finished the business of the day, and was just leaving his room, when he fancied that a spark of fire crossed the range of his vision, and had fallen among some bundles of paper; he sought for it, but in vain, till he was hurried from the room by the importunities of several gentlemen who were waiting for him; but a feeling of apprehension rested upon his mind, he returned with his compainions, and, under their jokes at what they called his groundless fears, when we all began to throw aside the bundles to be satisfied that no evil could happen, and fortunately discovered that the spark had passed nearly to the bottom of them, and had there ignited—it was immediately put out. This circumstance is related to prove that there is no certain safety from fire, without the use of incombustible substance as a protection and cover to that which is inflammable.—Compiler.

DUTIES OF COMPTROLLERS AND AUDITORS OF THE TREASURY.

COMPTROLLERS.

The First Comptroller examines and certifies to the accounts that are settled by the First and Fifth Auditors, and warrants drawn by the Secretary of the Treasury are countersigned by him. He decides on all revenue cases in dispute.

The Second Comptroller audits the accounts reported by the 2d, 3d, and 4th Auditors, which comprise the war, naval, and Indian expenditures.

Appeals are had to the Second Comptroller from the settlements by the Auditors, whose decision is final. All the bonds and contracts connected with its duties are filed in this office, and accounts kept of the specific appropriations.

AUDITORS.

The First Auditor of the Treasury examines and reports on the following accounts:

Accounts of treasury notes returned by the collectors of the customs and others to the Treasury for redemption; accounts relating to the public debt; accounts for the pay and mileage of the members, and of the contingent expenses of both Houses of Congress; accounts for the pay and mileage of the members, and contingent expenses of the Legislative Councils of the Territories; accounts of the Treasurer of the United States; accounts with the deposite banks; accounts of the Commissioner of Public Buildings; accounts for salaries of all the civil officers of the Government (except diplomatic) paid from the Treasury; accounts for the contingent expenses of the public offices; accounts of the collectors of the customs, their emolument accounts, extra compensation accounts, excess of deposite for unascertained duties, &c.; lighthouse and marine hospital act counts; accounts of judicial expenditures; accounts for the mint establishment; accounts of the coast survey; accounts for constructing standard weights and measures; accounts under special acts of Congress; for refunding money for land erroneously sold by the United States; accounts for the repayment on the withdrawal of applications for patents, and for refunding money paid into the Treasury through mistake; and for accounts for property lost or destroyed in the military service of the United States paid on the award of the Third Auditor of the Treasury.

The Second Auditor audits such army accounts as relates to its pay, subsistence, forage, clothing, and recruiting; the contingencies of the army; disbursements for its medical and hospital department; ordnance accounts; claims of the heirs of deceased officers and soldiers, and the disbursements for intercourse with the Indians.

The duties of the office of the Third Auditor extend to the auditing of all accounts for the Quartermaster's Department, both as to money and property, and the same as to the accounts for the subsistence of the army; also, as to accounts pertaining to the Engineer Department and Topographical Engineers; for fortifications; the Military Academy; roads, surveys, and other internal improvements; for revolutionary invalid and half-pay pensions paid by the different pension agents; pensions to widows and orphans, and of the claims of individual pensioners who may for fourteen months omit to claim or receive payments from the pension agents, as directed by law; of all unsettled accounts of the War Department, from the commencement of the Government to the 1st of July, 1815; and of claims for property lost, captured, or destroyed by the enemy during the late war with Great Britain; claims for revolutionary services in the State line of Virginia; claims for horses and other property lost, provided for by different acts of Congress.

The Fouth Auditor audits the accounts of the Navy Department.

The Fifth Auditor receives and audits the following accounts, certifies to the balances thereon, and transmits the accounts, together with his certificate, to the First Comptroller of the Treasury, for his decision thereon, viz:

The accounts of our ministers, chargé d'affaires, and secretaries of legation abroad, bankers in London, and United States consuls in foreign ports.

The accounts of our citizens claiming indemnity under treaties with foreign Governments, and the accounts of the commissioners, secretaries, and clerks appointed in pursuance of such treaties, for their salaries and contingent expenses.

The accounts of the several United States commissioners for ascertaining and marking the boundary lines between the United States and the territories of Great Britain and Texas.

The accounts of the agent of the Department of State, consisting of the contingent expenses of the Department, contingent expenses of foreign intercourse, expenses of the United States consulates in the Turkish dominions, contingent expenses of all missions abroad, together with his accounts for such expenses as have been left unpaid by the commissioners for boundary lines, and indemnity due to citizens, including all expenses left unpaid by marshals for the different States and Territories in relation to the census.

The accounts of the Commissioner of the Patent Office, consisting of the contingent expenses of that office, expenses of records and drawings, new models, library, and agricultural statistics, and fees.

The accounts of the agent of the Post Office Department, for the contingent expenses of the department, expenses of the building of the Post Office Department and furnishing the same, and expenses of publishing the post office laws.

The accounts of the United States marshals in the States and Territories, in relation to the census.

To the Fifth Auditor has also been assigned the duties of commissioner of the revenue, which are very considerable, embracing a superintendence of the whole lighthouse establishment of the United States.

FAVIER'S MINERAL WATERS.

A. FAVIER would most respectfully inform the public that he is now prepared to furnish his Mineral Water in bottles, to families, at their residences, in a great variety of flavors, such as Raspberry, Lemon, Strawberry, &c., &c.; together with plain Seltz, Soda, Saratoga, and other mineral waters.

A. F. would respectfully invite attention to the subjoined statement in relation to these waters, signed by Dr. THOMAS P. JONES, formerly professor in the Franklin Institute at Philadelphia, and more recently Professor of Chemistry in the Medical Department of Columbian College, in this District, and the late Dr. FREDERICK HALL, Professor of Chemistry in the last named institution; together with many of the most eminent physicians of the District.

The proprietor would state that the water made by machines like his, is now very extensively in use, on account of its great salubrity and invigorating and refreshing qualities as a summer drink.

Orders directed to A. FAVIER, 19th street west, near Pennsylvania Avenue, will be promptly attended to.

A. F. has also on hand, for sale, syrups in great variety of flavors.

☞ The bottles can be sent to any part of the District, and so packed as to send to any of the neighboring cities.

Washington, May 25, 1843.

To MR. FAVIER.

Sir,—We have, at your request, carefully examined your establishment and apparatus for the manufacture of mineral waters, and are fully satisfied that the article, as prepared by you, possesses, in an eminent degree, those properties which should recommend it to general use. The water of the spring from which you obtain your supply is remarkably pure, and your apparatus so constructed as not only to preserve its purity, but to insure its perfect and equal saturation with gas; your corking apparatus, also, enables you to secure it in bottles unimpaired in its properties. We shall be very glad, therefore, to learn that it receives that encouragement from the public which we are well assured it fully merits.

REILLY'S PATENT VAPOR BATHS,

Which the Government of the United States have purchased the right to use in the Army and Navy, upon the recommendation of numerous distinguished Surgeons of each of said services. In these Baths, the external application of sulphur, and any other irrespirable gas, vapor from herbs, &c., can be applied with perfect safety and convenience to the patient, and in which the lungs are not only defended from any irrespirable vapor that may be used, but also from the exhalations discharged from all parts of the body by profuse perspiration, to which they are exposed when the head is enclosed in the usual way—a practice always offensive, and in many diseases highly injurious, and quite unnecessary; as any desired vapor can be inhaled in these apparatus without this loathsome accompaniment. In these applications will be found a powerful yet safe general auxiliary to the efforts of the physician for the removal of disease, but particularly so in diseases of the skin, such as tetter, &c., as also in rheumatism and gouty affections, and after the use of any mercurial preparation.

The subscriber respectfully informs the physicians, and the public generally, that he has a set of these apparatus erected at his residence on Third street, where he is prepared to apply them, or when necessary, they can be applied in the chamber of the sick with perfect convenience and safety, there being a portable apparatus for the purpose.

HE ALSO ATTENDS TO

CUPPING, BLEEDING, AND LEECHING.
